Q My 10-year old son was well-behaved and intelligent; but recently, his behaviour has turned bad, his performance in studies has dipped and he has even started lying and stealing. Can homeopathy help in normalizing my son's condition?

>> In order to heal your son, the root cause of his condition needs to be identified. Regular techniques (including scolding and beating) only focus on correcting one's behaviour, without attempting to understand its root cause. Whereas, Homeopathy provides a complete insight into the root cause and treats it effectively.

According to homeopathy, any health/emotional problem develops in three stages. During your son's peak performance, he was in the Sensitivity stage. Here, he may have been subjected to negative emotions like over-pressure, over-expectation and anxiety which impacted his mindset. Since this condition was ignored, it progressed to the Hardening stage, where he tried to evade negative situations by lying and stealing. As this stage too was neglected, he went into the Indifference (Extreme) stage, where his academic performance declined and his behaviour turned bad. By treating the root cause of the problem, Homeopathic medicines not only cure the disease but also heal the person.

I recall a case where a boy's hair had turned hard. We discovered that despite scoring 80-90 percent in academics, his mother over-expected from him and scolded him if he played or watched television. As he could not express his feelings, he used to cry a lot and got hardened (Hardening stage). Soon, to avoid his mother's scolding, he started lying and occasionally stealing. Later, his marks dropped to less than 60% and he became indifferent and heartless. As mind impacts body, his hair too hardened.

With the correct homeopathic medicines, his Indifference stage was reversed to Sensitivity Stage. So, his attitude became positive, his intelligence returned and soon his hard hair softened.

At MindHeal Homeopathy, we not only treat the disease, but also cure our patients holistically - from body and mind.
