Assessment

Rajesh Punjabi was an obese, inhibited, fearful, timid 29-year-old who seemed to have little interest in life. He had always been that way and with no apparent reason. He was financially on even keel; he was married; he had no real worries. Yes, life seems to have dealt him an even hand.

Rajesh actually came to see me because his wife had urged him to. He had grown increasingly listless and sluggish and had no desire to go out and do the things all married couples do. He didn't say much at home and showed no interest in family, neither did he have any hobbies or interests.

Lately, Rajesh had developed varicose veins, which he attributed to his sedentary job, lack of exercise and recent weight gain. He was working with his father who ran an iron and steel business. But since he was an extremely timid type of guy, who didn't like mingling with people, Rajesh was unable to take up a managerial or marketing position in the firm.

There was another problem. Rajesh and his wife had been married for years but and though they had tried, they was no sign of a baby. Test revealed that Rajesh's sperm count was very low and he was suffering from a condition called varicocele.

Another interesting observation was that coinciding with Rajesh's increasing sluggishness and withdrawn behaviour, he had developed a festering varicose ulcer on his leg.

some very basic imbalances in his biochemistry.

The 29-year-old perked up a lot, lost some weight and most of all, he began to take an interest in his surroundings. Amazingly, he words, it was in Rajesh's genetic nature to be sluggish and disinterested.

The most dramatic change in Rajesh's life was that his wife conceived after he started treatment! If that sounds dramatic, consider this. My remedy worked on Rajesh's genetics to correct walked into my clinic during a follow-up one day and said he had taken up painting as a hobby.

His wife said Rajesh had begun to "show some feelings" at last. He grew angry, sad, frustrated - visible signs that he had begun to experience normal human emotions and engage with his environment.

The ulcer on his leg also healed and as his metabolism improved, Rajesh's sperm count had increased!
